When intriguing opportunities arise, Utah State University scholar Jonh Mojica embraces them. With just one project standing between him and completion of his bachelor’s degree in physics with professional emphasis, the undergraduate jumped at the chance to work with Physics professor and department head Jan Sojka on a unique venture afforded by a relatively rare cosmic phenomenon: August 21’s total solar eclipse.

For more information see Utah State Today.